

Sofía Rodríguez

Age: 20 years old

Occupation: Software Engineering Student

Economic status: Economically dependent on her parents

Sofía Rodríguez is a college student committed with her personal and professional development. She is conscious of the importance of improving her soft skills to compete in the job market. Even though she has tried multiple methods to improve them, she has found the currently available options unable to teach how to apply what she has learned in practice. Her goal is to find a more personalized learning environment where she can strengthen her communication, leadership and time management skills, to break the inexperience barrier and build a solid professional network. She is also very conscious of the importance of having a balance with her hobbies, studies and social life firmly believing that improving her soft skills is the key to better job opportunities and continuous personal development.

Characteristics and behavior

- Professional Environment Personality: She sees herself as flexible, creative and sociable.
- Self-Evaluation of Skills: She feels moderately competent, recognizing she still has areas of opportunity.
- Importance of Soft Skills: She highly values improving her soft skills as a key factor in achieving better job opportunities and personal development

Motivation and Goals

- Main motivation: Improving her soft skills to get better job opportunities and personal development
- Short and medium-term goals:

 - Achieving a balance in her academic and personal life

Frustrations and challenges

- Limitations of current solutions:
 - She feels the ways in which she has tried to improve her soft skills have not been very effective
- Challenges entering the professional environment:
 - Lack of experience and contacts
 - She has a hard time properly applying soft skills to her advantage

Learning needs and preferences

- Ideal learning format:
 - In person classes and mentorships that allow to put into practice what she has learned
 - Interactive content to ease the learning process
- Ideal solution:
 - Program with practical sessions, progress evaluations to identify improvement areas and personalized strategies that integrate theory with real life exercises.

José Eduardo Pech Ek

Age: 21 years old

Occupation: Computer Science student

Economic status: Primarily dependent on his parents but also has his own income.

José Pech is a college student with a more introspective and reserved approach to his professional development. Although he recognizes the importance of improving his soft skills, he does not always feel comfortable participating in group activities or spaces that require significant social interaction. He prefers to work independently and seeks self-learning methods that allow him to improve his soft skills without stepping too far outside his comfort zone. He feels insecure about the level of his soft skills and, although he would like to build a professional network, he struggles to initiate conversations or approach new people. His main challenge is finding learning strategies that align with his reserved nature while helping him overcome his insecurity in the professional environment.

Characteristics and Behavior

- Professional Environment Personality: Reserved, analytical, and methodical. Prefers working on individual tasks or in small groups with well-defined roles.
- Self-Evaluation of Skills: Sees himself as competent in technical areas but believes his interpersonal skills still need improvement.
- Importance of Soft Skills: Acknowledges their importance for his future career but does not prioritize them as much as his technical skills.

Motivations and Goals

- Main Motivation: Improve his soft skills to reduce his insecurity in professional settings and perform more effectively in team environments.
- Short- and Medium-Term Goals:
 - Develop effective communication skills, especially in professional environments.
 - Find strategies to participate in networking without feeling out of place.

Frustrations and Challenges

- Limitations of Current Solutions:
 - Feels that available workshops and courses are designed for extroverted individuals and do not consider more introverted profiles.
- Challenges in Entering the Job Market:
 - Struggles to perform well in interviews or group dynamics.
 - Lacks confidence in expressing ideas or taking on leadership roles in teams.

Learning Needs and Preferences

- Ideal Learning Format:
 - Self-learning materials such as books, articles, and online courses that allow him to improve at his own pace.
- Ideal Solution:
 - A personalized program to help him develop soft skills progressively, with exercises that do not require a significant time investment.
